Comments: I fully support, and urge the selection of, Alternative 1 (No Action) in the Forest Service's EIS-Alternatives to a Proposed Alaska Roadless Rule. Given the impending global ecological crises of climate change and 6th extinction events, "Alternative 1" is the only reasonable alternative proposed by the EIS.

The Tongass National Forest is America's largest national forest and a natural carbon sink, which holds an estimated 8% of all carbon stored in U.S. national forests. Scientists around the world also warn that we're living in a global extinction event, with habitat loss being a significant factor. The need to protect remaining old-growth forests from logging and fragmentation by roads has never been greater.

Note: I have also submitted comments via email.
