Comments: I support Option 1.

I cannot with good conscience stand by and leave unopposed the opening of this vital, undeveloped wilderness so important to our understanding of ancient migration into North America and still so important as a wildlife preserve. The unusual permanence of the coastal topography since the end of the last ice age means that there is no other place in the Americas which can better promise the preservation of evidence of the most archaic human activity.

For the Federal Government to ignore the imperative of preservation of this most pristine clime would guarantee indictment by future generations robbed of knowledge, nature and the health of our native environment.
