Comments: i believe it's utter madness to pursue this proposed change to the preferred alternative. for the sake of a few people making a lot of money (and no doubt a lot of people making very little money) the proposed preferred alternative offers up for destruction some of the very little remaining old growth and real wilderness land remaining. this in the face of indisputable climate mayhem. of nose-diving salmon return numbers. a study recently published in the journal Biological conservation details the massively destructive effects of light pollution on insect life.....how LITTLE it takes for us to destroy, even inadvertently, the ecosystems around us. let's not do it intentionally. we have to start approaching our interactions with the natural world not with ideas of short term economic benefit in mind. we must use sustainability and conservation as our guides if we are to live in a world that is not entirely parking lot. keep roadless alaska roadless.
