Comments: I find it very troubling that environmental protection laws are systemically under attack. Alaskan wilderness is a unique and critical part of the ecosystem of North America. In fact, the Tongva's National Forest acts as sacred habitat for many endangered species. It is a treasure that needs to be protected, because it cannot be replaced.

I support Alternative 1 which takes no action and would leave all of Alaska under the 2001 Roadless Rule, including the Tongass National Forest.

We can not afford to sell this precious ecosystem out to greedy lumber or mining companies, nor should roads divide it.

Fragile ecosystems should be protected- they are priceless.
