I, Henry Maier, do not support the idea of reducing restrictions on logging in the Tongass Forest of Alaska. Deforestation is a huge problem in America and is a large contributor to climate change. Not only will cutting down parts of the forest add stored CO₂ to the atmosphere, but it will destroy important habitat for animals there. The U.S. government needs to better understand that forests are vital natural resources and are not expendable- they were not created to be used for human resources.
