Comments: Pertaining to Jordan Cove LNG's Pacific Connector fracked gas pipeline:

Pembina is asking for special exemptions from two federal agencies that manage our public lands to build their pipeline through over 70 miles of publicly owned forests in southern Oregon.

This pipeline can't be built without violating longstanding rules and regulations that both Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management have in place to manage our public forests.

But, instead of denying the pipeline, both federal agencies are proposing to throw your existing forest management plans out the door to allow Jordan Cove LNG to construct the pipeline.

Is this one more assault by the Trump Administration on the rules that protected our public lands for so long? As federal land management agencies, whose bidding are you actually doing here?

If these exemptions are approved, a 100 ft. wide easement would be clear-cut through 70 miles of public forests so a Canadian fossil fuel corporation can build a fracked-gas pipeline to export gas overseas.

These wildfire-prone forests include key deer and elk hunting areas, critical habitat for multiple endangered species, and many places that are important for our local quality of life, economy, and many of our region's clean drinking water sources.

Deny Pembina's special exemptions. Why should they get special considerations at all? They are not even an American company! They probably don't even pay taxes towards the fed programs they are asking for this help. What exactly are the BENEFITS derived by American citizen's in return for these proposed changes to existing forest management? I don't see any. Please elucidate.

Deny Pembina's special exemptions!!!
