U.S. Forest Service Alaska Roadless Rule Committee:

Hello! My name is Cheyenne Miller. I currently live in Anchorage and since I moved here in 2017 one thing has stayed very clear to me; fishing rules Alaska. I recently visited Ketchikan, Wrangell, and Petersburg to campaign on The Roadless Rule and how important it is. Fishing has such a high economic driver in the S.E. and logging will never compare to the fishing industry. I completely understand that our current administration has made you choose between fishing and logging. I believe that you all will make the right decision and, hopefully, see that our fishing and these salmon streams are more important than bringing back a dying industry. Thank you!

The Roadless Rule has been instrumental in conserving the Tongass National Forest and in supporting its fish and wildlife-based industries for almost 20 years. Please uphold the Rule's protections for important fish and wildlife areas, including the Tongass 77. Roadless areas are an important source of food, jobs, and income through commercial, subsistence, and recreational fishing. Salmon are part of Alaska's culture and we must protect them and their spawning streams. Please do not roll back roadless area protections for habitat that our irreplaceable fish and wildlife populations need to survive.

Sincerely,

Cheyenne Miller
