Comments: I echo the following by SELC: "Public lands are owned and shared by all of us. The public should be made aware of all activities involving the management of their lands and should be given a meaningful opportunity to share concerns about specific actions. That requires knowing where actions will occur on the ground.

This blanket approval for a mammoth project-approximately 95 times bigger than the average Forest Service timber project in the Southern Appalachian Mountains-would go on for decades, and runs counter to how our national forests should be managed."

I support having more public opinion options available on individual actions, because this is wrong: "As part of the project, the Forest Service will not make decisions about where logging, burning, and road building will occur until public participation opportunities guaranteed by law have passed."
