

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/7/2020 12:07:57 AM

First name: Laura

Last name: Chapin

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Management of public lands without public input is inexcusable. How can you decide what to do with OUR land within OUR input? Management of our forests and recreation areas should be done with careful consideration of endangered botanical species, pollinators' habitat, migratory bird habitat, chemical exposures in waterways and its runoff, and maintaining healthy populations of game species. How can we trust the Federal government to handle these all important issues when the citizens are kept in the dark? Logging and logging roads? Will those benefit the land and the public who use it? Do loggers care what botanical wonders are in their way? Chemical herbicide applications? Who will manage when and where that happens and how the Chattooga River is effected? Will the public know if these effects are being monitored? The federal government is accountable to We The People. You cannot expect us to let the Forest Service to go on its merry way changing 150,000+ acres without public input. How insulting. And how tyrannical.