Comments: As an arm of the federal government, this agency has shifted dramatically its mandate of protecting wildlife and sustaining diversity of species to an agency of extermination, following the doctrine of exterminating Native Americans in order to provide free and clear land occupation by greedy White settlers and cattlemen. This is unconscionable in addition to altering the delicate balance of diverse wildlife that sustains all life. This agency now operates from the pockets of the cattle industry and government legislators who are profiting from such inhumane and counter-intuitive procedures. We must restore morality in our government's mandates; we must demand ethical behavior from the U.S. Forest Service.
