Comments: As an American citizen I am one of the owners of the Chattahoochee National Forest. If the Forest Service wants to come onto my land and harvest timber, spray herbicide, and build roads, they need to tell me specifically what parts of my property will be affected. Until this information is made available to me and my fellow owners we cannot decide if these projects are acceptable in the proposed areas. So unless the Forest Service can be far more specific and transparent to the citizen owners and users of this important land, it should delay the Foothills Landscape Project. An environmental impact study can hardly be done before even determining what environment is being impacted.
