Comments: The Foothills Landscape area is about 157,000 acres. The Forest Service proposes extensive changes for the area: allowing 60,000 acres of commercial timber harvesting; conducting prescribed burning on 50,000 acres;

applying herbicide across up to 74,500 acres; and, rerouting over 100 miles of trails. But you're not saying where in the area you plan to do these things.

The Forest Service is not providing site-specific proposals.

Typically, a project is announced for a specific area, then the Forest Service asks the public to comment, looks at the environmental impacts, and makes a decision. You need to do that for the Foothills Landscape area.
