Comments: I find it hard to believe that after all these years, the citizens as shepherds off the national forests in Georgia's are suddenly trying to get project approval before anyone actually knows where the projects will be and what effect they will have on our forests. This project will cover a huge swath of land, and assorted ecosystems. How can we approve any project in advance, without having any details? I am concerned that there is a plan to despoil or destroy the peoples' property in the name of the almighty dollar, and for the benefit of a select few. I am against this project without a lot more information.
