Comments: I don't think ruining the Chattahoochee National Forest is anyone's idea of good, and I was appalled to learn there has been no opportunity for public input on these mysterious projects! These lands are finally "reforested" from the time logging and mining ruined the landscape/environment/ecosystems in the early part of the last century. Tourism is a thriving-and growing- part of the economy in these reclaimed and revitalized forests in north Georgia and North Carolina. Why is the project important? Where, in the CNF will this happen, Who benefits from it? Why is it being conducted in SECRET? What benefit to the PUBLIC (TAXPAYERS) can this possibly have? This project should NOT go forward until those -and other - questions have been answered! I smell a rat!
