Comments: I am very concerned that the current Foothills Landscape Project review process requires the public to comment before sites for activities are chosen rather than allowing the public to use the established NEPA procedures at the time site-specific locations for treatments are proposed. The ecosystems of the Southern Appalachians are incredibly complex. Cutting trees in some areas can be relatively harmless but cutting trees in the wrong places can have devastating effects. Please reconsider the comment process! First, indicate specifically where you plan to conduct the various projects. Then, solicit public comments.

Thank you.
