Comments: I object not only to the extreme scope of this project but particularly to eliminating the public from the decision-making process. These are, after all, PUBLIC lands, not yours. You only manage them. And by cutting the public out of the process, especially for such a broad range of activities that will take decades to complete, means that you are taking these lands out of the public's hands. That is simply WRONG. It is also highly suspicious ... what are you so afraid of?
