Comments: My hope is that there will be more trails added to this and other U.S. national forests. My family loves riding ohm, in particular. We travel quite often to see what other states national forests have to offer and on dirt bikes or motorcycles, one can see so much of the land and nature, while also helping to support local communities when we camp or stay at a hotel and restaurants we eat at, gas we buy, parts for our bikes, ect. I don't see motorbike as being much more damaging to the land than horse, mountain biking or walking trails and in the grand scheme of things, those are all relatively a temporary and pretty light impact on the land. Also, a single track trail a foot or two wide is a natural happening, made from deer, elk, cattle and many other animals and I believe the forest is well equipped to handle it. Just my thoughts. Thank you
