Comments: I am in support of more active management in the Chattahoochee national forest. I would like to see the Hemlocks saved. I urge to be careful of chemicals that could leach into the water and cause damage to the fish and amphibians. Or releasing invasive's to control the intended insect that could eventually lead to unintended damage.

I am ok with timber cutting, I am not ok with 100 of acres of clear cutting and silt run off. Managed thinning and not using extremely heavy equipment would be best. Yes you can harvest timber using tractors instead of feller bunchers.

I would also like to see the timber be cut as a per acre fee to the logging company. What I mean is the National forest service pay them x dollars to take X trees. Otherwise greed sets in and the logger will cut everything plus to make his "Profit".

Last The fire idea is good.
