Comments: Please return to managing our forest to the best it can be. We need thinning, cutting, burning and long term plans to help the health of our forest and the animals that live there. I hunt the National Forest exclusivity and see the old growth forest choking out reachable food for wildlife and then when there is a bad acorn crop the animals suffer. They travel to road sides and any farm/agriculture to survive the hunger and many are doomed on the highway.

The deer and turkey are in dire need along with the grouse while the bear, hogs and coyote are thriving.
