Comments: I just today read about this project. If the information I read is correct, I am opposed to the enormity of the project. I do see the need for some forest management, prescribed burns with fire breaks, and possibly temporary rerouting of trails during this activity, but to give blanket approval of a massive project without specific plans is irresponsible.

Have a long range plan to include the whole area, but make specific plans for one smaller area and as that is completed, move on to another planned area. This would be much more manageable, reasonable and responsible.

Who has the final say of approval in this matter?
