Comments: The harvesting of trees or cutting are important for wildlife. New growth will provide browsing, cover and bedding for many animals. Not just for larger animals but smaller too. Deer can have bedding areas and a place for the does to leave there fawns if it is thick enough with new growth and feeding. Hen turkeys can have a place to make nest with the brush that is left over. Our ruffed grouse population has went down tremendously. When I was a young boy I remember seen them all the time. Now it is hard to find them. If logging and cutting areas is done right then their is no need to worry. Some areas need to be cut to make different habitats. Old growth forest are good but you don't need them everywhere. It needs to be diverse.
