Comments: Cutting down forests paid by the public to be protected, enjoyed and used to ensure the continuation of our species is an anathema. As we watch with horror as the Amazon slips away from us, the Congo, the forests of Indonesia we know we are causing the death of our children. So now, in our own backyards, we find even the question of whether we can kill our own children here as well as there and there and there? Why must we pretend that there is a conversation to be had? Do not pretend. We know that every one of those trees must remain untouched and in peace if we have any chance for survival at all. Do not pretend. We are beyond that. Save your children. Do not kill the trees. Thank you.
