Comments: You state that "the Forest Service values public participation." If that is so, the Service should ot implement a long term plan that cuts off public comment concerning the various projects as the projects occur. These lands belong to the public- not to timber companies and other specials interests- and the public should always have the right to comment. The Service does not need a blank check.

As a frequent user of forest service campgrounds and trails within forest service areas, I believe that recreational component of forest service use should be given great priority. I believe that is consistent with what the public wants- of all political persuasions. Yes, I know this is within the Department of Agriculture, but please at least let us comment on this massive project proposal.
