Comments: I am not sure if anyone noticed this but, if you read it real close from a legal stand point it is just a way for the federal government to get around RS2477. if the forest service chooses to, they can shut down all the roads in the affected zones for approved maintenance choose (alternative 1)and just not re-open them and it does not violate RS2477 of the 1872 mining grant. All they have to do is just not have the funding to repair the huge ditches they would create to close the roads. Once they chose not to repair an area after the ditch is dug and work began there would not be any way to address the closer for years.

i wish i had know about this sooner i would like to have been able to get more involved.
