Comments: I and my family believe in protecting lands, personally I lived in the east coast for several years and do not want Idaho to become what it has become out there. There are no more moose, bobcat, and many other species are missing. It is too easy to say money is what matters most. If we lose this land, and continue to lose it we will not have any more. From a scientific perspective, it is bad for biodiversity, the populations of species that have potential to be lost will not come back. We must protect Idaho and we must do it now, while there is still land to be protected.
