Comments: This herd represents a part of the state's history and heritage that should be given all due respect. Their place is on the land. So much has already been lost; why continue the brutal legacy?

The reason I gave up beef is for precisely the reason that is given for pushing the horses out of the area. The corporate beef industry thinks grass-producing lands should be managed around the needs of maintaining the livestock, while the cattle themselves only exist to bring a buck.

As a Phoenix-born Arizona native and recent resident of the Flagstaff area, I have simultaneously been drawn to the beauty of rural eastern Az, but also repelled by the attitudes and worldview of the subcultures who settled there and took it from the Apache. Do the right thing and exert some principle, someone, please, and create a new narrative that will make our descendants proud.
