Comments: first of all I question your count of horses. secondly if you are correct on your count all 500 horses could live comfortably in the acreage on the total forest land. Since there has been NO positive evidence of wide spread destruction caused by the horses I am opposed to any action that involves the wild horses. seems the forest service uses every opportunity to remove the title of wild from horses but on wolves and some other animals born and raised in captivity then released they are still specified as wild. If the designation for wolves is wild because they run free etc. then where is the double standard for horses that run free??
