Comments: I find it hard to believe that the percentage of horses versus cattle on this property is so overwhelming that it would necessitate a "round up" with fate unknown for the horses.

Why was Mary Hauser invited onto the committee to determine the horses fate with the forest situation and then suddenly off the committee for not being in the "spirit"? What you really meant was that she wasn't going along with the cattle ranchers need vs. the horses. SHAME on you!

It doesn't take a lot to figure out that "back room dealings" are alive and well in this situation. Wealthy ranchers getting their way at the expense of horses with "history" in the region. Not so, evidently, the ranchers helping to make this decision coming from Colorado and other states. Greed is always where it seems to hurt others, in this case it's the Heber Wild Horses that will pay the ultimate price. Their beauty and spirit no longer gracing the land that rightfully should be part theirs.

In all honesty, I often wonder how some people sleep at night knowing full well what they're doing is WRONG. How do all of you sleep?
