Comments: I am writing on behalf of my family, my country, and the Heber wild horse community. These wild horses are part of our American identity and heritage. Their genetic diversity has importance for the future, in ways beyond what we can imagine. To cash in their important existence for the small amount of money that cow farmers pay for grazing rights is an irresponsible use of public lands that will be remembered with outrage by our future generations. Support our country and it's heritage by supporting the Heber wild horses. Give them the land that they need to support a healthy, genetically diverse wild herd. Money and jobs can be made by guiding world tours to visit and learn about these American West icons.
