Comments: I do not support any additional growth affecting Forest Service land. Mission Ridge is a fantastic "local/regional" ski area. The greater Wenatchee region receives great additional winter resort income in general from it. Mission Ridge does not have a standard significant snowfall that supports itself as a "resort area" in general. Due to warming climate changes which are debatable but have been documented it does not make sense to destroy forest land for "lost gold". Wenatchee in general is isolated and has no major airlines other than Alaska from Seattle coming here, it may be different if they had a flight from SF or Denver but that will be 30 years from now when more warming patterns have developed and Mission Ridge is known as a local "downhill bike" resort not downhill "regional/destinal" resort.
