Comments: Please do not take all of the canned responses that have been put together by the horse advocates as valid . They may think they're speaking for everyone but they certainly are not . The horses need to be managed , they are a hazard and do not belong all over the forest . They need to be moved back to the territory and the size of the herd reduced . Seems like we could do like they do on the East Coast, have a gather every year select horses to be adopted and have a big event to adopt them. Same with the Salt River horses. These herds need to be down to a hundred like the ones on the Assateague island. They have been successfully managed for decades. And inbreeding does not seem to be a problem.
