Comments: Wild Horses have a right to live in the territory they have called home since 1971 or longer. There should be no set limit or number to how many horses can use this land. Wild horses have a right to the territory where livestock are only quests and ruin the environment. Horses cannot be removed they are our history and this country could not have existed without the horse. They deserve this land and the territory they have called home for so long. They should have the ability to roam without boundaries even if that means onto US Forest Service land.

The United States needs to recognize the history and development of the wild horse and give them similar status as Veterans who need a place to call home and live in peace.
