Comments: The forests in AZ are some of the most beautiful. I'm handicapoed so I cannot go into the forests to enjoy them. But what attracts me the most are the animals in the forest - all animals: deer, horses, burros, coyotes, and cattle to name a few. Part of what amazes me about the animals in the forest is how they live together in harmony if they are left in peace. Sure there are those who are predators but they take only the amount they need to survive. And there are many who eat the grasses and that is how they survive. The grass eaters support each other in the amount of grasses available as their droppings help the amount of grasses produced. I think people are the ones who are not supportive of the forests. If we take a step back and allow the natural balance to exist, all of the animals and the forest will survive and be in harmony. We must prevent people who want to eliminate the horses and burros for their own purposes and the Forest Service must take an active role in policing the area. Same we must prevent anyone who would want to slaughter the cattle who graze in the area. The animals work things out when left alone.
