Comments: As a German mother whose son and US-American daughter-in-law live and work in Ohio I want to urge you not to sacrifice the Wayne National Forest - the only national forest in Ohio! - for economic interests like logging and fracking. In this accelerating global climate crisis it would be irresponsible to do that. In Germany for instance far too many forests die now because of drought, heat and bark beetle attacks. Indeed we need almost every tree on this earth to survive! And: we need far more renewable energies instead of always more and more fossil ones which destroy the future of our upcoming generations. In Germany the percentage of the renewables is almost by 43 %. For the world as a whole it would be a great relief when also the United States (and Ohio) would affiliate again the global efforts to limit the greenhouse gases - and the species extinction especially in the Wayne National Forest, too!
