Comments: As a native Washingtonian and passionate outdoor recreationalist, the health and resilience of our ecosystems is extremely important to me. Restoring this area to wetlands is a crucial piece of the puzzle in this area, particularly with all of the successful conservation work that's been done or is in progress nearby.

I think that the humans that live nearby will win; the humans that will come to visit these wetlands will win; and the plants, animals, fungi, and all the other components that make up the ecosystems of Gold Creek will win with this restored hydrological system.

Thank you for your work.
