Comments: Great Burn Historical Snowmobiling Area

As it stands, somehow a historical public lands snowmobiling area sits, closed to motorized over snow recreation..... How did this come to pass, I do not remember ever seeing a "valid" explanation... As I see it, many many people who have never been there, will never be there, or ever plan to be there, seem to have a say.... I personally have been there, with many friends and family and loved and respected every second of that time and also loved and respected every inch of the land and all it's inhabitants..... And all this was done on a snowmobile, and not once in all the countless years of riding there did i ever ever see any other type of winter recreation, no skiers, no snowshoers, no hikers..... ONLY snowmobilers.....This area has been open to snowmobiling since the beginning of this record... And to think that the native inhabitants are just now becoming aware would be a foolish statement. Nature has long since adapted to our presence as a part of the natural surroundings..... Furthermore,,,,, once the snow melts, no man or animal would ever know i was there.... Please leave our HISTORICAL SNOWMOBILING AREA open.

Thank you
