Comments: First, I submit, extend comment period until 30 days after Pandemic is over. Secondly, those public/treaty lands really are not yours to sell. We, the people, use and enjoy them. Whether it's a young family or scouts hiking, or an elderly couple drinking along the roads simply enjoying the view. Third, and not the least of, those are treaty lands, those lands are held in trust to numerous uses by the Ojibwe to hunt, gather and use as needed/wanted. If you sell those off you are in my opinion breaking the treaties. The treaties that allow us, as non-native people to be here, to share in the use of the lands. Breaking the treaties as such perhaps might end in an expensive court case with all of the lands returned to full control by the native people. In other words the US Government Agencies need to quit breaking our lease with the indigenous people of United States, you're a bad tenant and going to get us all kicked off the lands we have been allowed to live on.

Sincerely,
