Comments: No ski area expansion should be approved by the USFS until uphill skiing is allowed in season at the resort. The resort is on public lands, USFS operated and owned by the American public. Purgatory is one of the few remaining resorts in Colorado that have not allowed this activity in season - either before or after operating hours or during operating hours. The resort should not be allowed to consume anymore land for personal use and profit until it starts to share use of this public land with uphill skiers. Approving Purgatory's use removes additional terrain from public use.
