Comments: I cannot believe that the USFS is considering a logging plan of this scale. Erosion causing a further strain on our fisheries, local economies hurting with the hit to tourism that would come from this, the higher risk of wildfires that come with more logging roads, more slash, more storm damage in weakened forests adjacent - all that's pretty unconscionable before you even consider the climate change impact or what this would do to wildlife habitat. This plan looks like something from the bad old days, and is a massive giveaway of a public resource that should be treasured. USFS has a duty of stewardship - this plan is an abdication of that responsibility, and frankly deeply stupid.
