Comments: My husband and I spent several days in this beautiful pristine area three years ago. The area was truly wild and having spent time hiking and exploring in 49 states, we can attest that such pristine wilderness is rare in the lower 48 states.

A logging project of this size poses great devastation to the rivers and the salmon spawning on them and other fish, and will greatly reduce the amount of carbon that can be sequestered, therefore contributing to global warming. We understand that there is a need for logging, but not of this scope.
