Comments: I am very concerned about this clear cutting plan, despite the efforts to "greenwash" it as a vegetation management project.

The recreation value to our community provided by leaving this property and its vegetation in its current state alone is far greater than any value produced by logging it.

Not to speak of the value, through sequestering carbon to counteract increased carbon by fossil fuel use causing climate change, the current greatest threat to our civilization and human wellbeing.

We as a society also have to stop disrupting the environmental systems, as our current pandemic is showing. The rebound consequences of this approach to our world are only going to keep getting bigger.

The economy is a a sub-system of our society which in turn is a sub-system of the greater environmental system of the world. There are no such thing as the "externalities" to our environment. Our economy, nor our society, can survive without a intact, funtioning environment. At this time our economy and our society does not know how to create, or even operate in, an intact, functioning environment. Until we do figure out how to do so, we need to stop these kinds of activities that tear down functioning eco-systems for the short term profits of "shareholders".
