Comments: We are better than this! "Vegetation management"? "Stand regeneration"?! Looks like most of this is actually "stand regeneration". Pfft...Talk about a euphemism for what ultimately amounts to clear-cutting. Unless of course you're a shill in bed with the logging industry and get off on this technical mumbo jumbo. This is not how the public wants to see its forests "work" today! Let them work as carbon stores, as centers for our new recreational economy, as protectors of our threatened wildlife. That's the economy we want.

We should not be benefiting a small, antiquated minority local economy by chopping down trees at scale. Not anymore. NATURAL thinning is acceptable to the extent it protects the base resource, but stand regeneration is a joke. Stop.
