Comments: Separating this process into consideration of the drilling only prior to consideration of a dam is an insult to the public.

At a time when citizens especially need a sense the government agencies operate in a dignified and enlightened manner, these guileless procedures bring any decent person's blood to a boil.

Many of us have worked with and in large organizations, and can easily see through to the intent of these types of processes.

If citizens of the United States do not want the dam and reservoir, there is no reason to desecrate the Homestake valley for what would therefore be useless information.
