As a fisheries biologist and former USFS Wilderness Ranger, I staunchly oppose this hydraulic project. Dams have detrimental impacts on the native fish. Not to mention dams, by nature, are temporary structures and a danger to those downslope.

By prioritizing industrialization over wilderness, Coloradans are destroying what makes Colorado unique. Progress for the sake of progress is not growth. It is cancer.

If the Vail NIMBY's don't shut this one down, the Boulder environmentalists will. I say that with a positive connotation.
