Comments: I would like to voice my dissent for this project. This is no place for a damn, and the damage to the land and resources far outweigh the benefits. The holy cross wilderness is a gem in our state, and the riparian area that this damn threatens is far more valuable as it is then it would be at the bottom of a lake. Cities have numerous options for reducing their water needs, simply grabbing more from protected areas is not sustainable nor beneficial. Colorado does not need more damns.
