Comments: We must change our thinking from money, expansion, progress in terms of bigger, better, more into what is best for the harmony of humanity, animals, plants, water, land, air, and the planet. We must seriously consider any actions in the pursuit of expansion as to how they affect the animals, plants, water, land, and air of that area, thus affecting humanity and ask ourselves is it worth it? I personally do not think we need to expand anymore in regards to opening up this terrain, as we have already made a significant impact on the vital ecosystem needed for lynx habitat and the greater ecosystem at large. Enough is enough. It is time to do what is right for future generations and for the animals that need this environment to survive healthily.
