Comments: To whom it may concern,

Cave management in National Forests is a complex and challenging effort and I applaud the Deschutes National Forest in making strides in these efforts. Success of this plans rides on collaborations with the local, regional, and national caving community, who share the Forest's goals of reduced impact to these unique resources.

I fully support the comments and concerns of the Oregon High Desert Grotto and hope that the forest works with them to continue to improve cave management on the forest regarding these issues.

Sincerely,

Benjamin Tobin
