Comments: The Salmon River is the last major undammed river in the continental United States. Diverting a portion of this river through a manmade tunnel will irreparably damage and forever change the wild nature of the river for all time. There will be no going back, no way to restore the pristine wilderness. And for what? Gold? Money? They could open a brothel to make money but that"s socially unacceptable. Raping the Salmon River for money is obscene and unacceptable.

Just the mere appearance of a conflict of interest used to be enough to set any reputable politician back on their heels. In this case, land sold by the governor to a gold mining company goes far beyond "mere appearance." Wrong is wrong and this stinks to high heaven.
