Comments: The Stibnite project is one of the few mining projects that is win, win, win.

The jobs, for a region like Valley County and the State of Idaho are nothing but good. And with the likely project lifespan, will not be here today and gone in 2-3 years. Taxes for those communities are important too.

As you well know, the Stibnite area already bears the marks of previous mining, stretching back nearly 100 years. It is not untouched, virgin land. And the mine plan being envisioned will leave the land better off than it is now.

And last, let us not forget, that in addition to gold, the deposit is a large resource of antimony, which is not only a critical metal to today's economy, it is also currently mostly sourced from mainland China. We need to control our own sources of these kinds of products.

So, for the greater good of the people and the land, please allow this project to move forward.
