Comments: The American Bison who reside in the Yellowstone Region should have access to roam freely in our forest land in that area. They are a species of Conservation Concern, in fact they should have been automatically mention as a priority to becoming a viable resident in the national forest and even more specifically the Custer Gallatin National Forest. That being said I do object to the plan as it now stands and this plan does need to be amended and revised to include the necessary protections for the American Bison habitat in it and that the Forest Service does recognize the American Bison as a species of concern.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.
